BLAME IS PUT ON STATE OFFICIALS

Many State Senators Put Responsibility on Williams and Matthews.

GOLOBIE URGES INDICTMENT

Republican Senator Would Bring Them to Trial for Condition at Home.

LEGISLATION TO BE REVISED

Entire Social and Home Measures to Cure Evils to Be Rewritten.

World's Capital Bureau, St. Louis Hotel.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 30.—Responsibility for conditions at the state girls' industrial home was placed upon former director William E. Matthews, state commissioner of charities and corrections, on the floor of the senate today when a dozen senators took part in the discussion which has been aroused by the publication of the reports dealing with the situation at the home.

In a speech by Senator John Golobie, republican, the subject was referred to as "the most important point of legislation before the lawmakers." Senator Golobie moved an amendment for the rights of women ahead and in the course of his remarks he said: "Governor Williams and Reverend Matthews should be indicted for allowing this condition to exist. Dante's Inferno could not be worse."

Blames Legislature. Instead of creating a furor, the senate accepted the speech of Senator Golobie in silence until Senator James Draughon took the floor to place a part of the blame upon the person who, he said, had made a point to let it stand by amending the legislation which gave Governor Williams the authority he asked for in connection with the home.

Senator Thomas F. Hensley, a member of the special investigating committee said: "Rhetoric is a good thing to listen to, but action is demanded in this case."

The discussion over the out of the bill to provide a provision for the establishment of a state institution for delinquent women, providing for its management and containing an appropriation for building and maintaining the institution.

"There must be no stalling of money," Senator Golobie declared. "We must appropriate every cent the situation calls for. We must abandon the idea of saving or holding down expenses when we are up against a pinch such as that involved in this question."

Senator Hill's measure was introduced before the agitation over the girls' home had been started. Since that time, many senators have investigated the situation in the home of their own volition of officially and the entire program with reference to the methods of treating fallen women and incorrigibles may be changed.

To Rewrite Measure. In view of these changed conditions Senator Hill proposed that consideration of the bill be referred back to the special committee on social welfare conditions in the state home to rewrite the bill. To this committee were added the names of Senators Hill and Thomas and it is likely that the whole measure will be rewritten.

It was pointed out on the floor of the senate today that separate homes for institutions must be provided for delinquent women and incorrigible girls. Another element which must be taken into consideration, it was pointed out, is the matter of treatment of those women who are suffering with venereal diseases. It is this phase of the situation which has brought down the severest condemnation of the system in the state which where young girls of 10 and 12 are brought into close contact with older women who are sufferers. These younger girls are even coached in methods of treating the diseased women and serve as nurses in the institution.

It became known today that Miss Winfield Elshaefer, matron of the state school, had written out her request that the legislature provide the means by which more adequate provision might be made for the treatment of those afflicted with social diseases and for their segregation.

Hospital Constructors Wanted. WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—With the announcement that 10,000 disabled soldiers are now being given educational work in 43 army hospitals, Surgeon General Ireland today sent out a call for additional contractors and hospital officers and enlisted men desirous of transferring to this service were instructed to apply to the division of physical reconstruction in this city.
